

Most Milk Received From Glossy Cows

In spite of the prejudice against the glossy, bony cow that never seems to get enough to eat, it is usually just such a milk cow that makes the profits says the Nebraska college of agriculture. This is especially true if her appetite is satisfied. The plump, well-rounded cow is often the star-boarder. Milk the cow that makes milk out of her feed.

Failure of Bonding Company Will Affect Some Notary Publics

Nebraska notary publics who are bonded by the Lion Bonding company of Omaha must furnish other bonds, according to notices being received from the county clerks. The company, once the pride of its officers, and whose stock was a much sought form of investment by Nebraskans, is now in the hands of a receiver under the state court. According to the view of W. B. Young, chief of the state insurance bureau, its stockholders will never again see any of the money they paid for stock. He hopes creditors, including policy holders, may receive something, but he thinks the chances are poor.

E. R. Gurney is president of the Lion Bonding company. The company had a capital stock of $3600,000, but when this was impaired and its surplus was gone the company was taken over by the department of trade and commerce. A receiver was appointed May 28, one month after the department had taken possession for the purpose of rehabilitating the company.

From an insurance standpoint the work of placing the company in good standing was satisfactory, according to Mr. Young, but about that time two lawyers in Minnesota began litigation in federal court and asked to be appointed receiver in Minnesota. They filed petitions in every state in which the company was doing business with a view to having the company liquidated through them.

This litigation in the federal court forced the Nebraska insurance bureau, through the department of trade and commerce, to ask for a receiver so that the company would be liquidated through the courts of the state. When the company was placed in the hands of the department of trade and commerce as receiver the policy holders automatically became creditors of the company to the amount of the unearned premiums on their policies that were thus cancelled. Mr. Young does not believe the company can pay 100 cents on the dollar to policy holders and says that stockholders are not likely to receive anything out of the wreck. The company was insolvent for more than $400,000 when the department took charge as receiver. Of its assets $600,000 is money due from agents, and not more than one-third of this is likely to be recovered. The Minnesota attorneys who seek to have themselves appointed receiver through federal court may appeal and the case is likely to go to the United States supreme court.

Reo Speed Wagons First to Enter Pueblo With Food and Tents

Reo speed wagons were the first vehicles of any description to enter Pueblo after the recent flood. These speed wagons, loaded with food, tents and bedding for the stricken city, were forced to travel over roads considered impassable, but they successfully plowed through the mud with their full supplies.

Adjutant General Hamrock of the United States army, who took charge of the relief work, selected the Reo speed wagon in preference to all other motor vehicles of any description for this work. His experience with the speed wagons in France led him to make this selection.

In addition to the first Reos, which entered Pueblo under their own power, General Hamrock requisitioned all that he could obtain in Colorado Springs, sending them by train to a point as close to the city as the train would take them. Twenty-seven were furnished by O. G. Sellers, Reo dealer at Colorado Springs.

These speed wagons were immediately set to work at assisting in the clearing of debris caused by the flood. With relief drivers alternating they were kept busy 24 hours a day. Speed wagons with power pumps were used to

It's A Hard Pull for the Man Who Does Not Save

IT CERTAINLY is a tough job for the man in the winter of life to pull through who hasn't adopted a system of saving. He will encounter many a rough sea and it is doubtful if his frail craft will withstand the terrific waves.

You must apply two principles if you wish to avoid the rough age of late life. Have a definite object in view and be systematic. Remember it only takes $1.00 to start a savings account and it may be the means of staying off the stormy seas later on.
